

Schools across the nation, including Reynolds, are experiencing challenges with receiving food for school meals due to supply chain issues and staffing shortages among food vendors. The Reynolds School District and other local districts are beginning to see the effects of labor shortages and supply chain issues. The school district has had some limitations to the variety of foods it is able to purchase due to some items not being available. However, until this issue is resolved, the meals served for breakfast and lunch may be subject to change, without notice, pending availability of certain food items and may vary from the posted menus.
